

Chokecherries-

Nature's Tiny Tart Treat!

What Are They?

Chokecherries are small, dark red to purple fruits that grow on shrubs or small trees. They're part of the rose family!

Where Do They Grow?

You can find them all across North America, especially in forests, meadows, and near rivers.

What Do They Taste Like?

Sour! That's why they're called "choke" cherries! They're too bitter to eat raw, but delicious in jams, syrups, and jellies.

Coloring Tip:

Chokecherries can be dark purple, red, or even black when-ripe. Leaves are bright green in summer and turn yellow in fall!
