- A current school or district improvement plan must be in place that covers all students and all buildings, whether through one plan or multiple plans.
- An "improvement plan" is a written document developed by the school district, based on local data.
- An improvement plan
 - sets forth policies, processes, practices, and strategies that are grounded in research and will lead to continuous improvement of student learning.
 - identifies a challenging set of goals and sets forth actions that will be taken to achieve the goals.
 - specifies the responsibilities of the school district and its schools.
 - includes periodic benchmarks, measurement processes, and evaluation protocols.
- An improvement plan must be approved by the school board and, after adoption, becomes an official district document.
- An improvement plan is subject to annual review.
